IN FOCUS: THE CHILD STATUS PROTECTION ACT (CSPA).

Dear Readers:

As we enter the summer months, the U.S. immigration and nationality law arena continues to heat-up. Upon the return of NPZ Lawyers from recent trips to Slovakia and India (for presentations about investment visas (EB-5) and business creation (L-1A) in the U.S.), we are barraged by a hailstorm of policy changes from the DHS. The most interesting and potentially far-reaching of these concerns F, M and J students being out-of-status upon the happening of a particular event (such as a student working without work authorization or completing his/her program plus the OPT and grace period (if applicable)).

Another recent and far-reaching development was that the Attorney General (AG) announced that Immigration Judges "do not have the general authority to suspend indefinitely immigration proceedings by administrative closure." The practice that was scrapped, known as "administrative closure", was used as a way to focus on more serious cases and reduce the Court's backlog. Most of the people who got their cases closed had children or spouses living in the US and later got permits to work. In the case, an Immigration Judge granted administrative closure, but since immigration courts fall under the jurisdiction of the Justice Department, the AG made his own ruling.

By way of background, "administrative closure" is a procedural mechanism to temporarily stop removal proceedings by removing the case from the immigration judge's (or BIA's) calendar. A case could be administratively closed to allow an event outside the control of the parties to occur, even if the event does not take place for many years. Once the case is administratively closed, neither the immigrant nor the government counsel need to appear in court to attend removal hearings until the case is re-calendared. While the case is closed temporarily, administrative closure does not permanently terminate the case, eliminate the existing Notice to Appear (NTA), nor result in a final order of removal.

As allegations of reductions to procedural safeguards for due process continue to plague Immigration Courts (because of announced quotas), the AG appears to be seeking new ways to make the removal/deportation process more efficient. As the new immigration regime continues to emerge, we cannot help but to think that Congress may realize that it needs to turn to "comprehensive immigration reform" (CIR) to take-charge of what the AG is slowly moving to control.

USCIS IS CHANGING ITS POLICY ON ACCRUED UNLAWFUL PRESENCE BY NONIMMIGRANT STUDENTS AND EXCHANGE VISITORS.

On May 11th, 2018, U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) posted a policy memorandum changing how the agency will calculate unlawful presence for students and exchange visitors in F, J, and M nonimmigrant status, including F-2, J-2, or M-2 dependents, who fail to maintain their status in the United States.

This policy aligns with President Trump's Executive Order: Enhancing Public Safety in the Interior of the United States to enforce the immigration laws of the country and will go into effect on August 9th, 2018.

"USCIS is dedicated to our mission of ensuring the integrity of the immigration system. F, J, and M nonimmigrants are admitted to the United States for a specific purpose, and when that purpose has ended, we expect them to depart, or to obtain another, lawful immigration status," said USCIS Director L. Francis Cissna. "The message is clear: These nonimmigrants cannot overstay their periods of admission or violate the terms of admission and stay illegally in the U.S. anymore."

More than 50,000 Hondurans who have been allowed to live and work in the U.S. after a massive hurricane ravaged Honduras a couple of decades ago will have 20 months to leave the country. Hondurans represent the second-largest group of foreigners who have benefited from the TPS program.

On May 4th, 2018, the Homeland Security Secretary, Kirstjen Nielsen, said she had determined that conditions have improved sufficiently in Honduras to warrant suspension of protected status for its citizens in the United States, according to a Department statement.

Hondurans in the program have until January 2020 to get their affairs in order and depart.

TREATY INVESTOR VISAS: WHO WILL QUALIFY FOR AN E-2 VISA?

The E-2 investor visa allows qualifying individuals to enter and work in the United States in order to partake in a substantial investment. Investor visas are only available to individuals immigrating from certain countries, and applicants must meet investment requirements. For some investors, the E-2 visa can provide the perfect opportunity to come to the U.S. to start or operate a business. Foreign investors considering applying for an E-2 visa should contact an immigration law attorney today.

It is important to note that the E-2 visa is a temporary nonimmigrant visa. Those seeking more permanent entry to the U.S. will need to apply for a green card through investment and must invest $500,000 or more.

USCIS TO RECALL INCORRECTLY DATED GREEN CARDS.

On May 14th, 2018, USCIS will begin recalling approximately 8,543 Permanent Resident Cards (also known as Green Cards) due to a production error. The Green Cards were for approved Form I-751, Petition to Remove Conditions of Residence for spouses of U.S. citizens. The cards were printed with an incorrect "Resident Since" date and mailed between February and April 2018.

USCIS will send notices to individuals who received the incorrect Green Cards and to their attorneys of record, if they have one. The affected individuals should return their incorrect Green Card to USCIS in the provided pre-paid envelope within 20 days of receiving the notice. They may also return their cards to USCIS field offices. USCIS will send replacement Green Cards within 15 days of receiving the incorrect card.

FRAUD.

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) and the Department of Justice on May 14th, 2018, announced a Memorandum of Understanding (MOU) that expands their collaboration to better detect and eliminate fraud, abuse, and discrimination by employers bringing foreign visa workers to the United States. This new effort improves the way the agencies share information, collaborate on cases, and train each other's investigators.

The MOU will increase the ability of the agencies to share information and help identify, investigate, and prosecute employers who may be discriminating against U.S. workers and/or violating immigration laws. In 2010, USCIS and the Justice Department's Civil Rights Division entered into an ongoing partnership to share information about E-Verify misuse and combat employment discrimination, and today's MOU expands upon the two agencies' existing partnership.

IN FOCUS: THE CHILD STATUS PROTECTION ACT (CSPA).

How can the CSPA protect children from aging out of eligibility for permanent residency?

Due to the immense backlog for visa applications, in 2002, President Bush signed into law The Child Status Protection Act (CSPA). The law applies when a minor applies for an immigration visa or an adjustment of status and during the process he or she turns 21 years old. Ordinarily, this would block the former child from becoming a permanent resident of the United States. The CSPA recognizes the issue of long processing times and essentially provides older minors with more time to successfully become residents. Our family based immigration lawyers offer more information about the CSPA below.

Who Is a Child Under Immigration Law?

Under federal law, a child is an unmarried individual under the age of 21. Many alien children can seek immigration benefits if they are the child of a U.S. citizen or permanent resident. However, traditionally, should the child turn 21 while his or her application for an immigration visa is still pending, the young adult loses his or her eligibility for a Green Card.

WHAT TO EXPECT AT YOUR MARRIAGE INTERVIEW - I-130/I-485.

If you're part of a married couple that includes a U.S. citizen or lawful permanent resident and a foreign national, and you've applied for the foreign national to get a U.S. green card (lawful permanent residence), the final step in your application process will be to attend an interview with U.S. immigration authorities.

Such an interview serves various purposes. The U.S. immigration authorities interview many people who apply for green cards, not just married couples. This gives them an opportunity to make sure that the relationship is the real thing, that all your paperwork checks out against what you say in person, and to examine your original documents (since you hopefully sent in copies).

However, in the case of married couples, the interview serves an additional purpose: to make sure the marriage is real, not just a sham to get the immigrant a green card. Due to the ease and speed with which aliens become citizens through marriage, many aliens marry for immigration benefits rather than for love. The U.S. government is well aware of this, and will ask a number of personal questions of both spouses in order to test whether they're telling the truth.
